Father's Day Frankfurter Feast to Feature First Female Contestant

East Colfax Eatery Hosts Hot Dog Eating Contest to Benefit Charity
2:30 pm, Sunday, June 15

Steve's Snappin' Dogs will kick off the second qualifying event for its inaugural "Chow Down for Charity" hot dog eating contest today, Sunday, June 15 at 2:30 pm. The contest features the first female contestant as well as other competitive eaters with nicknames such as Mongo, A-Bomb and Papa T. Papa T, a cancer survivor and single father of two, is a fan favorite but all bets are on A-Bomb and Mongo to take the top two spots given their already established reputations as two of the top competitive eaters in Denver.

Contestants will be given a total of three minutes to devour as many hot dogs as they can – bun and all. The top-two contestants at each qualifier will advance to the finals to be contested on July 27, 2008. Grand prize includes a $300 gift certificate to Sam's Club, a trophy, as well as other prizes. Second and third place winners also receive prizes and gift certificates. Subsequent qualifiers will take place June 29 and July 13 and Steve's is still accepting new entrants.

The event is aimed to gain awareness and funds for the Colorado Aids Walk and Project Angel Heart and takes place at the 3525 E. Colfax location. Part of the $25 entry fee and a portion of all hot dog sales on Sunday will directly benefit these charities.
